To: Whom it may concern

We are pleased to share our positive evaluation of the Erasmus+ “CACAT NFE FORI” youth exchange project held in Greece, in which our organization, the International Centre of Youth Cooperation NGO, participated as a sending partner from Armenia.

The project offered an inspiring and enriching experience for all participants. By combining art, creativity, and intercultural learning, it successfully created a space where young people could explore important social themes such as inclusion, diversity, and self-expression in an engaging and meaningful way.

Our participants returned with great enthusiasm, sharing that the week was filled with learning, collaboration, and unforgettable moments. They highlighted the interactive workshops, art-based sessions, and teamwork activities, which helped them discover new ways to express ideas, emotions, and social messages through creative methods. These experiences strengthened their communication and problem-solving skills and encouraged them to look at diversity as a source of unity and inspiration. They described the project as inspiring, empowering, and transformative — an experience that broadened their worldview and motivated them to apply creative approaches to community building and youth work back home.

As a sending organization, we also highly appreciate the dedication, professionalism of the hosting organization, whose efforts ensured the project’s success. This exchange perfectly reflected the values of the Erasmus+ programme — inclusion, intercultural dialogue, and non-formal education — and provided meaningful opportunities for personal growth and international understanding.

We look forward to future collaboration and to participating in more projects that empower young people through creativity, diversity, and shared European values.

Best regards,
